The Van Leer Jerusalem Institute

Third Annual Lecture in History and Philosophy of the Life Sciences

Why There Are No Living Things

Lecture by: Prof. John Dupré

Chair: Dr. Arnon Levy, The Hebrew University of Jerusalem

What does it mean to say that organisms are processes, not things?
And if humans, like all organisms, are processes, what are the upshots?
In this talk, John Dupré will explain the process view of organisms and explore its implications for topics ranging from the nature of medicine to personal identity.

John Dupré is a distinguished philosopher of science, with a main focus on the philosophy of biology. He is the director of the Centre for the Study of Life Sciences (EGENIS) at the University of Exeter.

Sunday, March 31, 2019, at 18:30, at the Van Leer Jerusalem Institute
